P. J. Cunningham Discredits Report From Colorado Springs.

P. J. Cunningham, president of the Cunningham Brothers Woolen Company, is still in doubt as to whether his son, William L., was married to Mrs. Penelope Peneaux-Dodd at Colorado Springs, Colo., news of which event was telegraphed to this city. "I never heard of Mrs. Penelope What's-Her-Name, and I wouldn't know the lady if I should meet her on the street. Seeing it was impossible to move the car from the track, they shouted to Motorman Brown, and the trio got out of the way.

When Engineer Bickel saw the street car standing on the track he shut off the steam and applied the emergency air brake. He then jumped from the cah, and fell against an adjoining rail, striking his knee. He was picked up by the crew of the repair car. An ambulance was summoned and he was removed to St. Mary's Indirmary. Fireman Dan Martin of Ferguson remained in the cab and escaped injury.

The engine struck the car with such force as to reduce it to splinters. Pieces of timber were hurled 190 feet. The pilot of the engine was knocked off and the front end caved in. The few passengers in the coach were shaken up but uninjured. A. J. Nolland of Ferguson was the conductor on the train.
